Directed by Ang Lee, author David Magee, movie stars Suraj Sharma, Irfan Khan, Rafe Spall, Taboo, Adil Hussain, and Gerard Depardieu. The storyline revolves around an Indian man named Pi Patel, telling a novelist about his life story, and how at 16 he survives a shipwreck and drifts in the Pacific Ocean on a lifeboat with a Bengal tiger. The film began developing shortly after the book's release, and will see directors M. Night Shyamalan, Alfonso Cuaron and Jean-Pierre Jeunet participate at various stages before hiring Lee. Filming was split between India, Taiwan and Montreal in 2011, with Rhythm and Hues Studios (R'H) processing visual effects work. The film premiered on September 28, 2012 at the 50th New York Film Festival at the Walter Reed and Alice Tully Hall Theater. Life of Pi has been a critical and commercial success, earning more than $609 million worldwide. He was nominated for three Golden Globe Awards, including best film - drama and best director, and won a Golden Globe Award for Best Original Result. At the 85th Academy Awards, she received eleven nominations, including for best film and best adapted screenplay, and won four (most for the show), including best director for Ang Lee. Plot in Canada, a young writer meets Pi Patel. The writer was told that Pi's life story would be a good subject for the book. Pi tells the writer the following story about his life: Pi's father calls him Piscine Molitor Patel after a pool in France. At a high school in Pondicherry, he takes the name Pi (Greek letter, π) to avoid the sound of so the nickname Pissing Patel. He grew up in a Hindu family, but at 12 years old, introduced to Christianity and then Islam, and decides to follow all three religions as he just wants to love God. His mother supports his desire to grow, but his father is a rationalist trying to secularize him. The P.P. family owns the zoo, and Pi is interested in animals, especially a Bengal tiger named Richard Parker. After Pi gets dangerously close to Richard Parker, his father makes him witness how the tiger kills the goat. When Pi is 16, his father announces that they must move to Canada, where he intends to settle down and sell the animals. The family books the passage with the animals on a Japanese cargo ship. During the storm, the ship's founders while is on deck. He tries to find his family, but a crew member throws him in the lifeboat. The freed zebra jumps with him on the boat, breaking his leg. The ship plunges into the Mariana Trench drowning his family. P's briefly sees what seems like a survivor, but it turns out Richard Parker. After the storm, Pi wakes up in a lifeboat with a zebra and joins a resourceful orangutan. The spotted hyena emerges from under the tarp covering half of the lifeboat and snaps at Pi, forcing him to retreat to the end of the boat. Hyena kills the zebra and then the orangutan. Richard Parker emerges from under the tarp, killing the hyena, before retreating back to cover for days. Pee fashion small strapped a raft of flotation vests, to which he retreats for safety from Richard Parker. Despite his moral code against killing, he begins to fish, allowing him to support the tiger as well. When the tiger jumps into the sea to hunt the fish and then comes menacingly to Pi, Pi finds letting him drown but eventually helps him get back into the boat. One night a humpback whale comes too close to the boat, destroying the raft and its supplies. P teaches Richard Parker to take him in the boat, and realizes that taking care of the tiger also helps to save his life. Weeks later, they encounter a floating island of interconnected trees. It is a lush jungle of edible plants, freshwater pools and a large population of meerkats, allowing P and Richard Parker to eat and drink freely and regain strength. At night, the island turns into a hostile environment. Richard Parker retreats to the lifeboat while Pi and meerkats sleep in the trees; water pools turn into acidic, digesting fish in them. Pi concludes that the island is carnivorous after finding a human tooth embedded in the flower. P and Richard Parker leave the island, eventually reaching the coast of Mexico. Pi is saddened that Richard Parker does not recognize him before disappearing into the jungle. He was rescued and taken to hospital. Insurance agents of the Japanese cargo company have disgraced it, but do not believe its history and ask what really happened. He tells another story in which the animals are replaced by survivors: his mother for an orangutan, an amiable sailor for a zebra, and a rough ship cook for a hyena. In this story, the cook kills a sailor and feeds on his flesh. He also kills Pi's mother, after which Pi kills him with a knife and uses his remains as food and fish bait. Insurance agents are unhappy with this story, but they leave without interrogating Pi further. The writer acknowledges the parallels between the two stories, mentioning that the second version of Pi is actually Richard Parker. Pi says it doesn't matter which story is true because his family still died anyway. He then asks which story the author prefers, and the author chooses the first one, to which Pi replies, And so goes with God. On a copy of the official insurance report, the writer reads aloud that Pi survived his great adventure in the company of an adult Bengal tiger. Starring Suraj Sharma as Pisin Molitor Pi Patel, age 16/17 Irfan Khan as Pi, adult Gautam Belur as Pi, 5 years Ayush Tandon as Pi, age 11/12 Rafe Spall as writer Taboo as Gita Patel, mother of Pi Ad Hussainil as Santos Patel, father of Pi Ayan Khan as Ravi Patel Pee's older brother, 7 years Mohamed Abbas Khali as Ravi age 13/14 Vibish Sivakumar as Ravi, 18/19 Gerard Depardieu as chef Van Po-chi as Sailor Yag Huang as sailor Andrea Di Stefano as priest Shrivanti Sainatha as Anandi, 16/17 years, Pi'17 girlfriend Mifili Pras Anandi, an adult, wife of Pi Raj Patel as Ravi, Pi and son Anandi named after Brother P Adrian Hamid as Adita , Pi and Daughter Of Anandi Eli Alouf as Francis development production I would use water because the film speaks of faith and it contains fish, life and all emotions for Pi. And the air is God, heaven and something spiritual and death. That's how I see it. I believe that what we call faith or God is our emotional attachment to the unknown. I am Chinese; I believe in the Taoist Buddha. We are not talking about a deity that is very similar to this book; we're not talking about religion, we're talking about God in an abstract sense, something to beat you. Ang Lee, on the use of water and the spiritual element of Pi's life, November 17, 2012. Numerous directors and screenwriters were attached to the project, and the Los Angeles Times commissioned Fox 2000 Pictures ceo Elizabeth Gabler to keep the project active. In February 2003, Gabler acquired a project to adapt Life of Pi to the film. She hired screenwriter Dean Georgaria to write the script. The following October, Fox 2000 announced a partnership with M. Night Shyamalan to direct the film. Shyamalan was attracted to the novel particularly because its main character also comes from Pondicherry in India. The partners expected Shyamalan to direct the film adaptation after the completion of The Village. He also replaced Georgaris as a screenwriter, writing a new screenplay for the film. In the end, Shyamalan decided to make the film Lady in the Water after The Village; He later said, I was hesitant to direct because the book has a kind of twist ending. And I was concerned that once you put my name on it, everyone would have a different experience. In March 2005, Fox 2000 entered into negotiations with Alfonso Cuaron to lead. Instead, Cuaron decided to direct the film Children of Men, and in October 2005 Fox 2000 hired to work in the film Jeunet began to write the script with Guillaume Laurent, and filming was to begin in mid-2006, partly in India. Jeunet eventually left the project. In February 2009, Fox 2000 Pictures hired Ang Lee to make the film. In May 2010, Lee and producer Gil Netter proposed a $120 million budget the studio refused, placing the development of the project for a short time. David Magee has been hired to write the script since Lee began spending months searching for someone to cast as Pi. Lee said that Water was the main inspiration behind making the film in 3-D: I thought it was a pretty impressive movie to make technically. It's so expensive for what it is. You kind of have to disguise a philosophical book as an adventure story. I was thinking about 3-D six months before Avatar was on screen. I thought Water, with its transparency and reflection as it comes out to you in 3-D, would create a new theatrical experience and maybe the audience or studio would open their minds a little bit to take something else. After the film's premiere, Lee said his willingness to take risks and risk helped with his leadership, saying, Strangely, he felt like we were vessels, we had to surrender to the god of cinema. We have to let that happen. I just had this feeling, I'm going to follow this kid to where this movie takes me. I've seen the movie begin to unravel in front of me. Pre-presenting and casting Suraj Sharma plays Pi at the age of 16. After 3,000 young people auditioned for the lead role in the film, in October 2010 Lee dropped Suraj Sharma, a 17-year-old student and acting newcomer. After receiving this role, Sharma received extensive training in ocean survival, as well as yoga and meditation classes, to prepare for the role. Canadian actor Rajiv Surendra, who starred in Mean Girls, was one of the auditions for the role of Pi. In 2016, he published Elephants in My Yard, a memoir about his unsuccessful campaign to win the role. In April 2011, it was announced that Tobey Maguire would join the film in a role originally called Reporter. However, in September 2012, it was announced that Lee had cut Maguire out of the film. He justified the cut by stating that he had made it to be in line with the other casting choices made for the film, I decided to go with a fully international cast. Like Shahrukh Khan, Lee described Maguire's presence as too jarringly recognizable. He shot scenes with Rafe Spalome as the real author of the book. Filming of the main photograph for the film began on January 18, 2011 at Puduichery in St. Rosary Church in Mutialpet. Filming continued in Puduichery until January 31 and moved to other parts of India, including Munnar in Kerala, as well as Taiwan. The film crew was filmed in Taiwan for five and a half months at the Taipei zoo, in Taichung and Kenting National Park, located in Pingtung County, where Lee was born. The film's oceanic scenes were filmed on a giant wave tank built by the crew at an abandoned airport. The tank is known as the world's largest self-generating wave tank with a capacity of 1.7 million gallons. With the production scheduled for two and a half months on the tank, cinematographer Claudio Miranda helped design the tank to get most of the lighting from it, explaining, We knew we were going to be inside the shooting for 2.5 months, so it was worth it to be able to do whatever we wanted. In all these scenes we had an idea of what the weather would be like. In this tank, I can create storm clouds after dark. We had curtains that I could block, open doors and let in real sunlight, Miranda says. So lighting wise, (the film) had great ebb and flow. After the photograph was completed in Taiwan, production returned to India and ended in Montreal, Canada. Post-production Leading visual effects company for Life of Pi was Rhythm and Hues Studios (R'H). The 3D effects for the film were created by a team of artists in Los Angeles, Mumbai, Hyderabad, Kuala Lumpur, Vancouver and Kaoshing. Bill Wester, R'H VFX (Visual Effects), said that discussion of the project began with Ang Lee in August 2009. Wester noted that Lee knew that we made a lion in Narnia's first film. He asked, Does a digital character look more or less real in 3D? He also said that during those meetings, Lee said, I'm looking forward to making art with you. This was really for me one of the most rewarding things I've worked with and the first chance to truly combine art with VFX. Each frame was an artistic study to make the ocean a character and make it interesting, we had to strive to make it as visually stunning as possible. Rhythm and Shades spent a year researching and developing, relying on their already extensive knowledge of cg animation to develop the tiger. In the journal View and Sound of the British Institute of Cinema Institute it was suggested that Pi's life can be seen as a film rhythm and shades that was built before all these years, taking things they learned from each production from cats and dogs to bear-yoga, integrating their animals in different situations and environments, pushing them to do more, and understanding how it can all succeed visually and drastically. Artist Abdul Rahman, from the Malaysian branch, highlighted the global nature of the effects process, saying that the special thing in Pi's life is that this was the first time we did something called remote visualization, where we brought our cloud infrastructure to the called CAVE (Cloud Animation and Visual Effects). Additional visual effects studios that have worked on the film include MPC, yU'co, Buf, Buf, Horse Effects, Look Effects, Christov Effects, Lola VFX, Reliance Mediaworks and Stereo D. Music Home Article: Life of Pi (soundtrack) The film's musical score was written by Michael Eithy, who previously wrote music for Lee's films Ice Storm and The Ride with the Devil. The music soundtrack was released by Sony Classical Records on November 16, 2012. The album features the track Pi's Lullaby, which was written as co-authors of Ethan and Bombay Jayashri, who perform the song in Tamil. Marketing distribution Due to the holiday release of the film, the financial success of Life of Pi was under control. Dorothy Pomerantz told Forbes: It seems the chances are very slim that the film will earn back its production and marketing costs, not to mention turn the profits. Pomerantz explained this by the fact that the film was not directed by the famous star and faced other winter blockbusters. John Horn and Ben Fritz of The Los Angeles Times compared the film to Martin Scorsese's Hugo, a big-budget 3D film that opened during Thanksgiving Week 2011. They said That Pee's life could end like Hugo, unable to connect with moviegoers and become a financial failure. Similar speculations have been made by other news sources. Whether Hurricane Sandy influenced the film's commercials was also a question. Because the film is including a massive storm, it has been speculated that a recent storm might have resulted in a lower box office income because of the unintended subtext of Sandy's devastation. A Fox spokesperson said there were no plans to change the film's marketing approach. During the marketing campaign for Life of Pi, the film was promoted as the next Avatar in trailers and TV commercials. James Cameron, the director of Avatar, later became the subject of two feature films that focused on 3D and computer images of the film. In addition, the original novel was renamed the movie. Later, the release of the book Making a Life of Pi: A Film, a Journey, which details how Pi's life was brought to the big screen. The theatrical release of Life of Pi was widely distributed in the United States on November 21, 2012, both in traditional and 3D viewing format. It was originally scheduled for release on December 14, 2012, but when The Hobbit: An Unexpected Journey was announced on the same release date, Life of Pi was postponed for a week. It was then moved a month in advance. Home Media Life of Pi was released on DVD, Blu-ray and Blu-ray 3D in North America on March 12, 2013. The 2D Blu-ray film release contains many special features, including a one-hour creation special entitled Epic Journey by the Director, two featurettes focusing on the film's visual effects, and two behind-the-scenes looks at storyboarding and pre-production art. In addition, the 3D Blu-ray film release contains five deleted scenes and a featurette VFX Progression, which takes a look at what was filmed and how it evolved to be what was rendered on the screen. The film was later released on 4K Blu-ray and digitally on March 8, 2016. As of May 8, 2013, Life of Pi has collected US$124,772,844 in North America and US$484,029,542 in other countries, totaling US$609,006,177. During its opening in the extended Thanksgiving weekend, the film debuted in 2,902 theaters across the United States and Canada and grossed US$30,573,101. On the Chinese mainland, from November 22 to December 24, the film topped the box office for three weeks, and grossed more than $91 million. As of January 24, 2013, he also topped the box office for three weeks in Australia, Chile, Chile, and four weeks in Mexico and Peru. The film became the biggest Hollywood hit of the year in India and is now the tenth highest-grossing Hollywood release of all time in the country. At the Hong Kong box office, Life of Pi earned 45,058,653 Hong Kong dollars ($5.8 million), making Ang Lee's film the highest-grossing film in Hong Kong. Life of Pi's critical response received positive reviews, with praise for the visual effects, lee's directing, Magee's screenplay, Danna's musical score and Sqyres's editing. It has an 87% approval rating on the Rotten Tomatoes review aggregator site based on 251 reviews with an average rating of 7.92/10. The critical consensus of the website is that Ang Lee's Life of Pi is a 3D adaptation of a supposedly unfilmed book - an amazing technical achievement that is also emotionally useful. At Metacritic, the film has an average score of 79 out of 100, based on 44 reviews indicating generally favorable reviews. Roger Ebert of the Chicago Sun-Times gave Life of Pi four out of four, calling it a wonderful achievement of storytelling and a leap of visual mastery as well as one of the best films of the year. He particularly praised the use of the 3D film, which he described as deepening the film's sense of location and events. By comparison, Rolling Stone's Peter Travers emphasized the use of 3D in the film, suggesting that like Hugo, from Martin Scorsese, Life of Pi puts 3D in the hands of a world artist. I don't. Lee uses 3D with the delicacy and lyrics of the poet. You don't just watch this movie, you live it. Parmita Bora of Eastern Fare says: There is one scene, particularly where the whole ocean is covered with jellyfish, which makes you feel like this is what the sky should look like. Los Angeles Times critic Betsy Sharkey called the film a masterpiece, saying that: there is always a poetic aesthetic that Lee brings to her best work - the brutal martial arts ballet Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon or homophobic hatred of the greatness of the backcountry Humpback Mountain, which will bring him an Oscar directing in 2006. In Pi's life, certainly, given his technological advances, the director raised the bar. Not since James Cameron's spectacular blue Avatar in 2009 has 3-D had such an impact. In an interview with the Los Angeles Times, Cameron himself emphasized the use of the 3D film, noted that Pi's life breaks the paradigm that 3-D must be some kind of great, action fantasy performance, superhero movie ... The film is visually amazing, inventive, and it works for you in a way you really don't know. It takes you on a journey, and if you've read a book - which I don't - you have no idea where this journey is going. It does what a good 3-D should do, that is, it allows you to forget that you are watching a 3-D movie. Jan Martel, author of Life of Pi, gave positive reviews after watching the film. According to French journalist Marjolen Podut, the film is a philosophical tale where Noah's ark transmorphosis in Raft Medusa. She adds that this is a visual masterpiece in which Ang Lee once again proves his talent as a universal storyteller. She also writes about the visual poetry of the film, reminding the audience about the works of classical artists and the symbol of the Columns. The film received 8 out of 10 stars, readers gave 7 stars. The novel's author, Yann Martel, found the film a delightful adaptation, saying I'm happy it works as well as the film. Even if the ending is not as ambiguous as in the book, the possibility that there may be another version of Pi's story comes at you unexpectedly and raises the same important questions about truth, perception and faith. A. O. Scott of The New York Times criticized the film's narrative frame, arguing that the film invites you to believe in all kinds of wonderful things, but it can also make you question what you see with your own eyes - or even wonder if you've seen anything at all. Scott also criticized the film for suppressing the dark themes of the tale. Nick Scheger of The Village Voice also filmed the film, stating that the theological investigation with a stacked deck filtered through the Titanic-by-the-path-out-of-the-Slumdog Millionaire narrative, Pi's life manages a random spiritual miracle through its 3-D visuals, but otherwise sinks like a stone. it's a shallow and self-confident story of a shaggy dog - or a shaggy tiger story... It deserves every technical prize going. Time's Richard Corliss chose the film as the third best film of 2012 and also named it the next Avatar. The film was described as containing a subtle, artistic warning about the dangers of increasing man-made carbon dioxide emissions and ocean acidification, the sour island of Pi and Richard Parker collide compared to Castello Aragonese in the Tyrrhenian Sea near Naples and the final Richard Parker departure, representing the not-so-pleasant fate of Gaia (see Gaia hypothesis). The main article of Accolades: The list of awards received by Life of Pi Life of Pi was nominated for eleven Academy Awards and received four (more than any other film of 2012): Best Director (Ang Lee), Best Cinematography (Claudio Miranda), Best Visual Effects (Bill Westenhofer, Guillaume Rocheron, Eric-Jan de Boer and Donald R. Elliott) He was nominated for three Golden Globe Awards and won the award for Best Original Performance. The film also won awards for cinematography, film editing, sound effects and original score at several other awards ceremonies. In addition to the Academy Award, Ang Lee won awards for best director from Kansas City, Las Vegas and London film critics. The film was awarded Best Film by the Las Vegas Film Critics Society and was named one of the top ten films of the year by New York film critics and film critics of the Southeast. Controversy and accusations of animal cruelty Allegation was made that the Oscar-nominated song Lullaby Pi, performed and co-written by Bombay Jayashri, used compositions written by Irayimman Thampi. Jayashri denied the allegation. Despite the Oscar for best visual effects at the 2013 Academy Awards, Rhythm studios and Hues Studios (which provided most of the visual effects for the film) were forced to file for bankruptcy on February 11, 2013, citing unfair competition from subsidized and tax-exempt foreign studios. This sparked a demonstration of nearly 500 VFX artists who protested outside the Oscars in 2013. Instead, during the Oscars, when R'H's head of visual effects Bill Nexothor picked up R'H during his acceptance speech for Life of Pi, the microphone was cut off. In addition, director Ang Lee was criticized by the protest leader for not thanking the effects industry; Ang thanked the team, the actors, his agent, his lawyer and the entire population of Taiwan right up to the team that built the wave pool on the sound stage where Pi was shot, but did not mention the hundreds of artists who made not only the main character of the tiger, but replaced this pool that makes it look like a real ocean for 80% of his film. He has also been criticised for previously complaining about the cost of visual effects. In February 2014, Christina Lee Storm and Scott Lebercht released the documentary Life After Pi on YouTube. The documentary details the role of Rhythm and Hughes in Pi's life, as well as subsequent bankruptcy. Bill Nexothor also discusses his experiences at the Oscars as he accepted the visual effects award for Rhythm and Shades of Work on Pi's Life. The Trust, named after the Musician Iraitman Tampa accused Bombay Jayashri's Oscar-nominated song The Lullaby Pi of not being an original song. The trust claimed that the first eight lines of the song were a word translated by the famous lullaby composer Tampi in Malayalam Omantinkil Kidavo. Jayashri denies the allegation. In 2013, a Hollywood Reporter investigation released leaked emails stating that animals involved in the filming of Life of Pi had been mistreated during filming, despite the American Humane Association's certification of No Animals Were Harmed for the film. On April 7, 2011, ACA monitor Gina Johnson wrote that last week we almost killed King. The email further suggests that the incident, in which a tiger apparently nearly drowned while filming the scene, would be downplayed in the official ACA report. In addition, the disclosure alleges that Johnson was involved in a romantic relationship with one of the film's producers, possibly of a conflict of interest. In an interview with Life of Pi, director Ang Lee described the animal cruelty allegations as an accident. Following the publication of the Hollywood Reporter investigation, Gina Johnson resigned from her position at the ACA. New animal protection concerns were raised in 2015 when PETA released a video that appeared to show Life Of Pi animal trainer Michael Hackenberger swearing and flogging a young tiger 19 times. In April 2016, the Ontario Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals indicted Hackenberger on video evidence.
